

IN BRIEF

Way forward

Designers Rina Dhaka, Varun Bahl, Charu Parashar, Diksha Khanna and Pallavi Singh showcased their creativity in khadi and silk at an event organised at Indonesian Embassy in Delhi recently. Organised by the New Delhi Social Workers' Association (NDSWA) with support of KVIC, the event showcased the power and appeal of khadi by roping in not only known names in the fashion industry but also differently-abled designers. For the event, designers mentored women to create contemporary and stunning designs and dresses. This initiative to promote indigenous fabrics of India was taken under the Sansad Adarsh Gram Yojana of MP Dr. Udit Raj to showcase the power and appeal of khadi by bringing in the differently-abled designers and the country's top couturiers together.

Speaking on the occasion, Gaurav Grover, President of NDSWA said: "This association will give khadi and silk a platform to present India in international market and also encourage designers to work with this fabric"
